OPEN CALL FOR PANELISTS

Help shape a creative California. Gain valuable insight into the grantmaking process.
Apply to serve on a California Arts Council peer-review grant panel!

We're searching for panelists to serve on peer-review panels for our grant programs in the spring of 2019. With your help, we can ensure that our grant application review process is democratic, fair, and representative of California's diverse geography; wealth of organizations; racial, ethnic, and gender identities; perspectives and knowledge.

By providing your support to the arts and culture community throughout the state, you are participating in cultural policy in action.

HOW IT WORKS

Each spring, applications to our grant programs are reviewed by a panel of three to five arts and culture experts. Panelists independently read and review between 30 and 60 applications online, then meet in person in Sacramento for one to three days to collaboratively rank applications. The rankings are brought to the California Arts Council to inform funding decisions.

SUPPORT

New this year! Panelists receive a $100 honorarium for each day of service in Sacramento, in addition to travel, accommodations, and per diem.

TO APPLY

For more information or to apply online to be a California Arts Council panelist, go to www.arts.ca.gov/panelist.

Note: Approved panelists may be called upon to serve on one of our grant panels in 2019 or 2020. Approved panelists who applied last year do not need to reapply. To confirm you are on the approved panel pool list, check the "Fiscal Year 17-18 Panel Pool" link found on the Panelist page of the California Arts Council website.
